

The End Is the Beginning

Our world feels unsettled. With wars, climate emergencies, and fast-changing technology, many people wonder if this is “the end” or simply a major turning point. The Bible was written in similar times, when society felt unstable and people feared what was coming next.

Jesus and John the Baptist reminded people to look honestly at their lives: What truly matters? What values guide you? Those questions still matter today. For years, success has been defined as getting ahead, having the right job, the big house, the perfect life. But many now see that this old dream has left many far behind, it just doesn't fit our changing world, it doesn't work!

As old systems fall apart, Christ invites us to help build something new: a world shaped not by competition or fear, but by peace, justice, and compassion. Like a carpenter, we use the tools God gives us, love, mercy, and humble service, to rebuild what is broken and create a better future.

We must stand with and for the poor, the underprivileged, the needy, we must speak out, without fear or favour; without us (the church), where will our governments find the moral leadership our nation deserves?
