

Each year, on Remembrance Sunday, we pause in gratitude and reflection. We remember with deep respect those who gave their lives in the service of others, men and women who left behind families, homes, and futures so that peace and freedom might endure.

Their courage, faith, and sacrifice remind us that love often asks the highest price, and that the peace we enjoy today was dearly won. In our prayers, we hold not only those who fell in battle, but also those who returned bearing the scars of war, and the countless civilians whose lives were changed forever.

As we wear our poppies and fall silent in remembrance, may we also renew our own commitment to peace in our homes, our communities, and our world.

Let us be instruments of reconciliation and hope, so that future generations may live free from the shadow of conflict.

“Greater love has no one than this, that someone lay down his life for his friends.” John 15:13
