

Church and Family

The Third Week of Advent invites us to pause and reflect on joy, not the fleeting kind that depends on circumstances, but the deep and steady joy that grows when people choose to care for one another. As we move closer to Christmas, we remember that God chose to enter the world not in isolation, but into a family, a village, and a community. From the very beginning, the story of Christ is woven through with the lives of ordinary people supporting, encouraging, and standing alongside each other.

In this season, we are reminded that our church family is one of God's great gifts. We are called to be more than people who gather in the same building once a week; we are called to be companions on the journey, sharing burdens, celebrating joys, and offering comfort, warmth, and welcome to all.

Advent teaches us that waiting is easier when we wait together. When one person's light flickers, the surrounding candles help it shine again. When someone struggles, the love of the community lifts them. And when someone rejoices, that joy multiplies throughout the fellowship.

As we light the third candle, may it inspire us to look outward as well as inward, to notice who needs a kind word, a listening ear, or a helping hand. May we choose compassion in our words, generosity in our actions, and patience with one another, knowing that Christ's love is made visible through the way we care.

May we be a people who bring joy simply by being present with each other

May we reflect the hope, peace, and coming joy of Christ.

And may we welcome the Christ-child by welcoming, supporting, and loving one another.
